Description

I took this photo a few years ago during a stay at the French Cote d'Opale; a beautiful coast in the northwest of France with chalk cliffs and the typical gray rocks in the sea. During high tide the entire coast is flooded in a very short time, so one has to be very careful, before you know, you'll be waist-deep in the water. . The changing skies and the shades of color between sea and sky are spectacular. This was just before a huge thunderstorm erupted , but the sun still tried to show its face for a while .

Specifications

Original photographic print on Fuji Crystal DP II and sealed with durable elastic silicone on 2mm thick glossy acrylic glass
With stable rear part in Dibond aluminum.
